

Dosch Design in Motion:

3 new products released from our Dosch Viz-Images sub-group "Moving People"

(December 3rd 2008)

Dosch Design is an established „shaker & mover“ in the field of architectural visualization. Now we are "moving" things some more with 3 new products from our Dosch Viz-Images product line, focusing on clip-map sequences of moving people, shown in various settings.

Dosch Viz-Images: Moving People – Urban shows people moving about in an urban environment; alone, in pairs, while talking, or simply while strolling down the street.

Dosch-Viz Images: Moving People – Travel contains sequences of typical travel scenes, like people with luggage, people waiting for transportation or enjoying a sight-seeing tour.

Dosch Viz-Images: Moving People – Business offers a series of depictions from the job world - People dressed in professional attire, and presented in typical business situations like meetings, phone-calls or working at the computer.

Each one of the 3 new products contains 20 Clip-Map-sequences of people in high resolution (ca. 800x1200 pixel per person) which are "cut out" perfectly for "borderless" blending in of the Viz-Image with the overall scene. This is accomplished by using the corresponding, 700 frames-long Alpha Channel to the individual moving person sequences. As with all Dosch Design products Dosch Viz-Images can be used commercially without any additional royalty payments. The images are provided in the widely used JPG-format and sell for $109 per product.
