

Music for Architecture

(October 22th 2008)

In the field of architectural visualization Dosch Design has for years been offering a diverse selection of productivity tools which make designs more interesting, and which have become an integral part of many users' creative arsenal. Now Dosch Design expands its "cover-all-bases" approach to the field of Audio effects. The latest addition, DOSCH Audio: Music for Architecture is uniquely positioned to connect presentations, architectural proposals and the like with the audience on an acoustic level.

The product contains 15 high-quality music pieces with the potential to complement and indeed enhance the user's visual presentation. Each piece has a duration of between 3 & 5 minutes and all have been composed with use in architectural visualization, marketing-clips or real-estate promotion in mind. The audio tracks are completely royalty-free, and can therefore be used publicly at no additional cost. All tracks are high-quality WAV-files in HiFi (44.100 kHz, 16bit Stereo), allowing their use in professional productions. The price is $109, and sound samples can be found at www.doschdesign.com.
